Award for Optiscan Founders

At a ceremony held in Melbourne last night, Optiscan founders, Peter Delaney and Martin Harris were awarded a prestigious ATSE Clunies Ross award for excellence in the innovation and commercialisation of scientific endeavours.

A total of six awards were presented to successful finalists, whose innovations were judged to be making a real difference to Australia, economically, environmentally and/or socially.

The board of Optiscan warmly congratulates Peter and Martin on this significant recognition of their pivotal roles in the development and successful commercialisation of Optiscan's unique miniaturised confocal endo-microscopes.

The other 2007 award winners were Peter Farrell, Paul Gottlieb, Ian Fraser, Arthur Lowery and Nancy Mills. Further information is available at www.cluniesross.org.au.
